

Whitelist Switch

List of Positively Tested Switches

English

1 Abstract

A switch is a network device responsible for the control and distribution of data packets. Therefore, it enables the connection between network components and terminal devices.

The IT market offers a wide range of switches significantly differing in terms of quality and integrated functions. In order to ensure that the complete range of functions of Dallmeier systems can be used, we recommend only using such switches as listed in this white paper. These switches have undergone comprehensive tests and checks.

This document contains the lists of positively tested device series.

2 Updates

At the time of production of this document, the following lists of positively tested switches were available. Please check for possible updates on www.dallmeier.com:
